Communicating Effectively with Parents

January 2012

Parents and staff are partners in learning to work together for the highest and best for the child. When parents and staff communicate, children's needs are met more effectively. When parents participate, it enhances children's learning. By being supportive and nurturing each other, we create a caring community. Just as parents need to be recognized for their best abilities, staff must self acknowledge their capabilities to create partnerships with parents that create trust and credibility. Once parents REALLY know that you are in partnership with them and not ABOVE them, the journey for success has begun! This workshop will explore what are the elements that must be developed in order to have healthy and open relationships with parents with the goal of strengthening the family.

Work-Life Integration

February 2012

The specific focus of this session is to ensure that staff are conscious of creating a work environment that is balanced in the four energy fields as identified by Tony Schwartz in his work, The Energy Project. To perform at our peak, humans need to satisfy four key needs. In order to be truly effective it is imperative that staff maintain focus on keeping these fields balanced. The Four Forgotten Needs that Energize Great Performance makes a compelling case for a new kind of workplace resulting in a better way of working and a more deeply satisfying life. In this session we will see how employers and employees have unconsciously begun operating like computers: continuously, at increasing speed, running multiple programs simultaneously resulting in an unbalanced life. We will learn how to recreate a balance by meeting our four key needs - physical, emotional, mental (self-expression) and spiritual (significance). Participants will explore and experience tips that will facilitate this process resulting in a more balanced life style and a richer and more fulfilling life in all quadrants.

Creating Peace Through Understanding Relationships

March 2012

Judgment, strategies, criticism, and control are all ways that we react to parents with children who struggle. We promote and extend aggression in families and aggravate challenging behaviors when we behave in ways that distance families from us. There is a better way to respond to children and their families and it is based on building respectful relationships with them. Aggressive or disrespectful responses to parents and to children is a key way that we promote ongoing conflict and resist creating spaces for peaceful and respectful interactions and relationships to occur. This workshop focuses on how our reactions and responses invite behaviors and actions that we really wish to avoid and will teach participants how to understand others and respond with respectful and peaceful interactions that build safety and promote peace.

Positive Discipline for Handling Difficult Behavior

April 2012

The webinar addresses when children present difficult behavior. Participants will be introduced to basic principles that will lead to effective interventions, and to conceptual clarity that, in turn, lead to effective discipline. Since children are more than their behaviors, the webinar will discuss potential underlying issues that both cause acting out and promote adult clarity that will lead to positive discipline. Individual needs are balanced with the socialization necessary to be successful in the classroom or family community.

Cultural Journeys: Art, Diversity & Social Studies

May 2012

Children hear about world events and go to school with children from many different cultures. In this creative workshop, you will learn how art can help construct a child's view of cultural differences and similarities. In today's society, children must learn to respect and tolerate diversity, and manage cultural conflict effectively. This workshop presents simple but effective art ideas that help reduce prejudice and stereotyping in schools.

Autism Spectrum Disorder: Strategies that work!

June 2012

The goal of this training is to provide information on basic components of autism spectrum disorders. In this course, participants will be able to define the characteristics of Autism Spectrum Disorders and identify research-based strategies to address the behavioral, social and communication needs of individuals with Autism Spectrum Disorders.

"Bullying" – It's More Than You Think

July 2012

Bullying harms the targeted child, those who witness it, and even the children who bully. Adults have a responsibility to provide a safe environment for children. In this Ask an Expert discussion, learn more about bullying behavior in young children. Find answers to questions such as, "What distinguishes a 'bossy child' from a 'bully'?" "What are some strategies that teachers can offer to young children so they can effectively resist bullying?" "Does bullying behavior in a preschool child tend to persist throughout childhood and into adult life?"

GIGGLES & WIGGLES! Music, Movement & Creative Activities for Circle Time

August 2012

Circle Time, Group Time, Rug Time...any time that children come together for activities that include everyone. It's a special time to share songs, fingerplays, rhythms, rhymes, movement games, creative activities, stories, or whatever else that a particular day may bring. Circle Time provides for a listening time, a time to develop attention span, promote oral communication, and a time for learning new concepts and skills. It's a time for auditory memory, sensory experiences, socialization, and a time for FUN! Circle Time can be a complex, dynamic interaction among adults, children and resources used. Join in this hands-on participatory workshop demonstrating a variety of techniques and props that you can make and use to enhance your circle time. The benefits of group time will be discussed, as well as tips for conducting a successful circle time.

Creating Indoor Environments for Young Children

September 2012

An early childhood environment is many things. It's a safe place where children are protected from the elements and are easily supervised. And it's where the important activities of the day like playing, eating, sleeping, washing hands, and going to the bathroom take place. Beyond the basics, however, an environment for young children implements and supports a program's philosophy and curriculum.

Going Green

October 2012

Participants will learn simple and effective techniques to make their child care an environmentally healthy safe and green as possible.

Time Management

November 2012

Don't seem to have enough time to get everything done each day? Always feel like you are running late? Taking on too much? Is your lack of time management taking its toll? If you answered yes to even 1 of these questions, this workshop will assist you in learning how you can change your life through organization and setting priorities. Develop a personal action plan that will bring you the work-life balance you desire.

The Importance of Play in Early Childhood Education

December 2012

Watch a young child at play. Sure he's having fun, but take a closer look and you'll find there's more to the picture than meets the eye. Through play, children develop the foundations they'll need to succeed in life, from problem solving and social skills to basic literacy, math and science.
